Journal of Pidgin and Creole Languages

Edited by Bettina Migge and Anthony P. Grant
University College Dublin / Edge Hill University

The Journal of Pidgin and Creole Languages (JPCL) aims to provide a forum for the scholarly study of pidgins, creoles, and other contact language varieties, from multi-disciplinary perspectives. The journal places special emphasis on current research devoted to empirical description, theoretical issues, and the broader implications of the study of contact languages for theories of language acquisition and change, and for linguistic theory in general. The editors also encourage contributions that explore the application of linguistic research to language planning, education, and social reform, as well as studies that examine the role of contact languages in the social life and culture, including the literature, of their communities.

JPCL publishes its articles Online First.

The journal has a companion series of books, the Contact Language Library, formerly Creole Language Library.
