JICB Book Review Guidelines

The Journal of Immersion and Content-Based Language Education (JICB) does not accept unsolicited book reviews. Potential book review authors are invited by book review editors. JICB book reviews are peer-reviewed; only individuals holding a Ph.D. or equivalent degree are invited to submit book reviews for publication. Graduate students are welcome to co-author book reviews with professors.

Should you be interested in authoring book reviews and/or becoming a reviewer of manuscripts, we welcome you to register as a JICB author/reviewer at http://www.editorialmanager.com/jicb/.

While book reviews provide some level of summary, they primarily analyze, comment on and evaluate the work. They should give readers an engaging, informative, and critical discussion of the work.

Book reviews are typically 850-1000 words in length for a monograph and 1000-1500 words for an edited volume. Book reviews must be written in English (with either British or American spelling). We ask that authors of book reviews not cite references in the book review, although it is acceptable to provide some information about a source within the review itself.

An important point in developing a book review is to address the readership of JICB, which is both international and multidisciplinary. For writing the review, book review authors should consider:

- the intended audience for the book and who would find it useful;
- the background of the author(s);
- the context or impetus for the book;
- the main ideas and major objectives of the book and how effectively these are accomplished;
- the appropriateness and rigor of methods and information sources used;
- a comparison with other works on this subject;
- constructive comments about the strengths and weaknesses of the book;
- for edited volumes: dominant themes with reference to specific chapters as appropriate; and
- implications of the book for research, policy, practice, or theory.

The header of the review should include:

- Author(s) or editor(s) first and last name(s) (please indicate if it is an edited book)
- Title of book
- Year of publication
- Place of publication and Publisher
- Number of pages
• Price (please indicate paperback or hard cover) if available
• ISBN

At the end of the review, please include:

• Your first and last name
• Institution affiliation
